

Canine Angel tames our BEAST!

Canine Angel is a culmination of a life long passion for animal welfare, by fanatical founder Nikki Brown. Qualified in both human and dog psychology, Nikki is truly a fountain of knowledge when it comes to analysing and overcoming the problems and heartaches shared by dogs and their owners.

Nikki has spent a life time gathering experience in canine behaviour and body language and has an astounding ability to truly understand the mind of a dog. This has provided her with an invaluable insight into how they communicate with those around them.

The Canine Angel's comprehensive range of skills in her field include psychological assessment of behaviour for both dogs and their owners, touch, massage and energy healing therapy along with animal communication through telepathy. Nikki works with totally natural techniques and therapies and helps the animals and their owners she comes into contact with overcome their heartaches and problems within their relationship.

On first meeting Dion and her Rottweiler Kain, Nikki could immediately see the problems Dion was facing. Kain is one of the larger breeds and along with this had bundles of energy. He was very demanding and wanted lots of attention.

Kain displayed behaviours of dominance by projecting his energy all over the place and leaping and bounding into everything including Nikki. He leant his heavy body over Nikki and tried to sit on her - a classic sign of how the alpha male would behave in the pack in the wild.

Kain also had a built a repertoire of misbehaviours that he had learnt would get attention from Dion. He would pick up anything that was lying around, socks, pot pourri from the bowl and take things that were not his to take. Our human reaction to this kind of behaviour is to shout 'No' and try and take the item from the dog.

Shouting and yelling 'No' or 'Drop It' is actually just reinforcing this behaviour as the dog is getting what he wants which is attention. You can remove the item from the dog by using your body language alone says Nikki. You have to claim the item as yours and project this intention and energy towards the dog and remain calm and assertive. You can put your hand out or use your body to get in the way of the item the dog wants and say 'thank you but that's mine' and push the dog away from it. Once you have the leadership status over your dog he will respect that the item is yours and leave it alone.

Nikki got to work quickly on Kain and started to reflect Kain's energy back towards by standing tall above him with her body language saying 'I am the leader here' - back off!

Dion had explained that Kain had problems when visiting the vets as he did not like anyone touching his body. Again Nikki explained this was a classic sign of the alpha dominant behaviour Kain was exhibiting.

Alpha males of the pack do not like to be touched without invitation.

After Nikki had projected her energy that she was of Alpha status Kain actually laid down and let Nikki touch and massage his body all over, even his back legs that he wouldn't let anyone touch before.

Nikki used touch and massage therapy to work with Kain in order to let him 'let go' of the stress and tense energy that he was holding onto by taking on the role of the leader of his pack. Kain quickly calmed down and became attentive towards Nikki and followed her every instruction.

Nikki transformed this hyper bundle of energy that had given Kain the reputation of 'The Beast' into a calm, submissive and puppy-like dog.

Photography by Richard Webster Photography
Specialising in Lifestyle Pet Portraits, Children & Family Lifestyle sessions
www.richardwebster.co.uk

after the session!!

before the session!!

Dion could see Kain really enjoyed his massage and he went to sleep after giving his body the time to take full effect of the calm energy Nikki had given to him through her treatment.

Nikki also looked at Kain's diet and suggested that the dried mix he was on wasn't agreeing with him and probably contained too much protein that the dog was not digesting fully. Sugars and preservatives that are added to a lot of the manufactured foods on the pet market do not help with behaviour and emotional issues too. Nikki suggested that Kain was to be given more raw meat on the bone. She explained how dogs eat this way in the wild and it has enormous health and psychological benefits to eat this way. Dogs do not cook their bones or meat in the wild and therefore we shouldn't cook their food either.

Their digestive systems are not designed to process this type of food correctly. Nikki says 'it is vitally important that your dog see you as the leader of the pack'. Nikki's work is not just about getting your dog to do what you want him to but it is about saving lives. If you do not have the correct leadership status over your dog he may bite someone or even worse kill them. That then will be the end of your dog's life too and that's something many owners have had to face and never really gotten over. Dogs that believe they are the leader often run off and get hit by cars too or get into fights with other dogs or chase bikes or people. All of which is unbearable to have to deal with.

Nikki's work also helps with rehabilitation of dogs and she specialises in working with very aggressive, nervous or shy dogs. She has seen many dogs not been given a fair chance when they get a new home and the owners don't know what to do and give up on the dog and return it back to the home. Nikki says it's a huge problem out there and once owners learn how to become great pack leaders then they can have a happy fulfilling relationship with their dogs.

So how do you know if your dog believes he or she is leader of your pack?

- Your dog will wake you up and demand attention from you
- Your dog will walk through doors before you
- Your dog will walk in front of you when on the lead
- Your dog will demand for food
- Your dog will growl or bark when you try and remove something from his mouth
- Your dog will bark when someone arrives at the front door
- Your dog will sit on sofas or sleep on your bed.
- Your dog will demand attention from you.

If you would like more information on how to become a great pack leader of your dog the natural and simple way then visit www.canineangel.co.uk

Nikki Starts Kains massage with his head area

Nikki massaging Kain's face and neck

Nikki massaging Kain's legs and chest and Kains looking into Nikki's Eyes

Kain having his back massaged